Massachusetts has two USCIS field offices: Boston (JFK Federal Building, Room E-160) and Lawrence (280 Merrimack Street, Suite 610). Your ZIP code decides which one handles your case, and neither takes walk-ins. There are two immigration courts, Boston (Room 320) and Chelmsford. The apostille costs $6 per document and comes from one place, One Ashburton Place, Room 1719. Turkish citizens have one consulate for six states, in Boston.

THE NEW STATE LAWS: WHAT THEY PROTECT AND WHAT THEY DO NOT

- G.L. c.147 s.64 (in force since September 4, 2026): state and local police, sheriffs, MBTA and Massport police and court employees may not ask about immigration status, use state resources for federal civil immigration enforcement, or hold anyone past their release time solely on an ICE detainer.
- G.L. c.221D (from November 3, 2026): no officer, including federal agencies, may make a civil arrest at a courthouse without showing a judge-signed warrant or order, and never in a courtroom. An administrative ICE warrant or an immigration judge's document does not meet that requirement.
- But: the first law does not bind ICE or CBP, and neither law gives a private right of action; the Attorney General enforces them. Whether federal agents will comply with c.221D is not yet known. They give you no new status and no certain protection. If you encounter ICE or CBP, speak with an immigration attorney first.
